

Shiny, the Rabbit with Golden Ears – A Story of Greed and Grace

By Thivya Venugopal

Deep inside a vibrant forest lived a little rabbit named Shiny. He was unlike any other, for his ears were pure, glowing gold!

These amazing golden ears let Shiny hear the softest whisper of pain from far away. He was always the first to rush and help any creature in trouble.

For every five good deeds, a sparkling gold coin would appear at his feet, as a gift from the sky. Soon, Shiny's burrow was overflowing with a mountain of shining gold!

But the more gold he collected, the more his heart hardened. He loved his riches so much that he began to ignore the faraway cries.

High above, Lord Krishna noticed Shiny's greedy change. Krishna loved all the forest creatures and was very unhappy to see the little rabbit turn selfish.

One morning, as Shiny woke up, he saw his gold coins were shrinking, and his special ears were no longer golden. They were just plain, soft grey.

Shiny felt a deep sadness. He realised that he had lost his magic because of his selfish, greedy behaviour. His life felt dark and empty.

Even without the magic ears and the promise of gold, Shiny decided to go back to the old ways. Now, whenever he came across any animal suffering in pain or needing help, he helped the animals without any expectations in return.

Day after day, Shiny helped any animal he saw, simply because it felt right in his heart. Lord Krishna watched him with a gentle smile.

Then, a wonderful thing happened! As Shiny finished helping a weary owl, his ears began to glow with a brilliant, golden light once more. His magic was back!

Shiny felt a joyful surprise! This time, he used his new, growing riches to help all the animals who were suffering. He became the forest's most respected and beloved hero.

Every day was now an adventure in kindness, and Shiny learned the greatest lesson of all.
